SEEK WOMAN KIDNAPER OF MISSING GIRL

ALLEN TRAILS KNOWLES

Joe Knowles has offered from the public platform to bet $20,000 that he can take three or six men and go into the Maine woods and live the life of a primitive man. Now that cold weather has come Knowles should be warned of the hardships of such a trip as he proposes.

It is cold these days in Boston, but me, oh my, think of being alone in the Maine woods with no clothes on and no matches, no food, no carlage. Knowles clearly doesn't realize what he is up against, and so he should read the adventures of the AMERICAN'S own City Life Section's pet wild man of the woods, and fearless explorer, Lewis Allen, who started into the Maine woods to live the life of a primitive man. Messages drifted back from Allen from time to time and here they are printed just as they came. Knowles will find them interesting as have those readers of the Sunday AMERICAN who read them in the City Life Section in September.

It had been planned that Joe Gomez, an old trapper, would go into the woods and get Mr. Allen's story as he wrote it from day to day. Mr. Allen was provided with paper and pencil, but came to use it for writing purposes only. He went into the woods under exactly the same conditions as Mr. Knowles, except that he was not quite as well dressed as Knowles, being somewhat bold. It is with considerable pride we print herewith the account of Allen's first week in the Maine woods disguised as primitive man, this disguise consisting solely of removing all clothing.—EDITOR.

Monday—As I sit here in the shade of a giant pine tree on a moss-covered rock—did you ever try to sit on a moss-covered rock in the altogether?—and think of the pages of union suit advertising in the backs of the magazines, it seems to me such a garment would make my happiness complete. Eve has all my sympathy. I don't blame her for hastening to eat an apple so she could have an excuse for demanding clothes. I would eat a barrel of apples for one pair of ordinary burlap pajamas.

Fortunately, I ate a hearty breakfast before entering the woods, and it was along toward evening before I really yearned to be where I could grab a long, four-page menu, and, running my finger down the printed lines, order everything on it, even the music. But I found some berries and ate those, and remembered that the inner part of brakes are

APPEAL BY WOMEN TO END TRUST

An "endless chain" boycott, carried on by postal card and by personal visit, is the plan of the Greater Boston women who met today at No. 262 Washington street to organize.

Mrs. Edward P. Barry, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor-elect, is at the head of the movement. The plan in detail is this:

Let every woman write ten postal cards at once, to her friends, urging them to join the boycott.

Let every woman pledge herself to at least one hour's active work each day to further the boycott.

Let the slogan be: "Two-cent eggs or none."

The proposal in detail is that presented by Mrs. Anna T. Steinauer, president of the Housekeepers' League. The meeting today was expected to result in the establishment of the "United Consumers' League," to carry on the fight.

Mrs. Barry in announcing her plans today said:

"If every housekeeper will give some time every day to this project of reducing the price of storage eggs, it can be done.

"We want to get as many women as possible on our side in every section of this city.

"If this undertaking is to be successful every woman must help. It will not do for any one to stand by and merely watch this boycott, but let every housekeeper get into touch with it and control her personality."

Mrs. James M. Curley of Roxbury, wife of Congressman Curley, is enthusiastic over the movement. She says:

"If we could only empty the cold storage houses of eggs four times a year, and had a law to that effect, you would soon see the prices drop.

"I know people are tired of hearing about more legislation, but we surely need it. Compel the eggs to come out of storage four times a year."

A large number of prominent women have promised their aid to Mrs. Barry. Among them are Mrs. Charles A. Burns, wife of the Mayor of Somerville; Mrs. Oliver B. Munroe, wife of the Mayor of Melrose; Mrs. Joseph Lindon Smith, Mrs. G. E. Lothrop of Brookline, Mrs. Anna T. Steinauer, president of the Housekeepers' League; Mrs. Joseph A. Bryant of West Newton, Mrs. E. J. Powers, wife of the president of the South Boston Citizens' Association; Mrs. D. Henry Crain of Dorchester.

MOTHER "INSULTED," IRENE JONANI QUITS GRAND OPERA IN HUFF

Irene Jonani, American prima donna, who quits Boston Opera Company before her debut, because Director Russell refused to apologize for doorman's alleged insult to her mother.

Irene Jonani isn't going to sing at the Boston Opera House this year. She resigned by telephone this morning. Miss Jonani is a Chicago girl and was to have made her grand opera debut Saturday night as Rosina in the "Barber of Seville." Hazel Sandborn Cavadore will sing the role.

The trouble started because an attache of the Opera House was rude to Miss Jonani's mother. Yesterday afternoon at a rehearsal of the "Barber" Mrs. Jonani waited for her daughter in the narrow passageway of the stage door. The stage doorkeeper told her she would have to go into her daughter's dressing room if she wished to remain in the Opera House.

Mrs. Jonani reminded him of who she was and the doorkeeper said he would say the same thing to Henry Russell if he blocked the passage. Just at this moment Director Russell happened to pass and Mrs. Jonani called him to her aid. To her indignation he agreed with the doorman.

Mrs. Jonani departed and when the young prima donna came home told her story. Miss Jonani was also indignant and failed to attend rehearsal this morning. When Director Russell asked over the telephone why she was absent she declared he had insulted her mother and demanded an apology.

"I have three witnesses who know I addressed her courteously and politely. Now come to rehearsal."

"I won't," said the prima donna.

"Then you're contract is automatically cancelled."

"I don't care," exclaimed Miss Jonani. "You must pay back the money we have already paid you."

"That isn't necessary."

"We shall take steps to collect it."

CHARGE OF FALSE ARREST

An emphatic declaration of the innocence of his sister, Miss Ella Brewer, and of her motive in her suit against Patrolman John J. Horgan of the City square station, Charlestown, upon the accuse of falsely arresting her, was made today by John Brewer, a well known Boston business man.

All the evidence in the trial of Horgan by a board of three police commissioners is now in the hands of Police Commissioner O'Meara.

Other relatives and friends of the Chelsea girl declared today that the fight is by no means ended in the battle to clear Miss Brewer's name. They said they were willing to let the police judge with all the facts brought to light.

Call Arrest "Outrage."

Miss Brewer, who is the daughter of Elisha Brewer, a prominent Boston manufacturer, was arrested by Horgan last September and locked up on a charge of drunkenness. She was exonerated the next day in court. She at once filed charges against Horgan, and herself took the lead in what she called her fight for justice.

In this fight she has the moral backing of hundreds of Greater Boston women and the direct support of scores of Chelsea people who know her. These friends declare her arrest an outrage and a disgrace.

"I am fighting for my name and I do not intend to let the matter drop," Miss Brewer has said. "I never drank a drop of liquor in my life and I am not going to have it said that I was drunk.

"I always thought the police were for protecting people, but instead of that I was insulted."

The trial of Horgan has lasted several weeks. The trial board was made up of Captains Sullivan, Harriman and Goodwin.

"My sister is innocent and must be vindicated," said Miss Brewer's brother today. "Under demands this. Her charges are true."

Also Charges Abuse.

The specific charge against Horgan in the trial under the police rules was of conduct unbecoming an officer. There are Miss Brewer's accusations against him.

That her shirtwaist was torn at the back by him.

That he caused a black and blue mark on her right arm above the elbow.

That Morgan swore at her.

That he did not tell her the reason for her arrest.

That her arrest was absolutely unwarranted and unfounded.

That she was in a police cell she heard several policemen "framing up" the testimony they gave in court the next morning.

Accosted by Sailors.

The arrest caused a sensation. Chelsea people generally were focussed. It came out that Miss Brewer had been to a party at the home of a friend in Mount Vernon avenue, Charlestown, and left at 11 o'clock for her home. Horgan accosted her in City square, where she had been accosted by two sailors. She walked away from them, threatening them with arrest.

Miss Brewer said Horgan asked her name and what she was doing there. She said she told him it was none of his business.

"Then Horgan claimed I was drunk, seized me roughly by the arm and took me to the police station," said Miss Brewer.

GIBLIN GUILTY; SENTENCE WAITS

Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston pleaded guilty, before Judge Aiken in the Superior Court today, to a charge of assaulting James E. Maguire, editor of the East Boston Free Press.

Giblin appeared in court with his wife, walked directly to the bar, replied "guilty" to the clerk's question, and then when the clerk said: "That will be all for the present," withdrew again to the corridors, where he had been waiting for an hour beforehand.

Sentence was deferred. Giblin had appealed from the sentence of two months in the House of Correction, which was imposed by Judge Barnes in the East Boston court. He had been released at that time on a $500 bond.

Assistant District Attorney Lavelle denied that there was any arrangement to let Giblin off with a fine as a result of the "guilty" plea. He said:

"He must take his chance with the court. District Attorney Pelletier will later announce the date when sentence will be imposed."

Giblin is a former representative and an ex-alderman. He served in the House last year. After winning the nomination at the primaries this year he was defeated for re-election by Thomas A. Siland, as independent.

35 Wanderers Turn Pullman Car Into Haven of Comfort

Thirty-five men, some left homeless by the Arcadia fire, occupied a parlor car in the B. & M. yards, connected it with the yard steam pipes, and made the Pullman into a little paradise of comfort last night. Special officers led by Frank O. Dewher rounded them up early today, and in the Municipal Court they were put on probation and warned "not to do it again."

"But they've back there to-morrow morning," remonstrated Patrolman Dewher.

REWARD OF $1,000 FOR HER CAPTOR

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—That Jessie Evelyn McCann, the Flatbush heiress, was lured from her home by a letter from a woman, and then kidnaped, was the theory evolved today, following the offer of a $1,000 reward for the recovery of the girl and the punishment of her abductors.

Miss McCann's disappearance last persisted the weird case of Dorothy Arnold, who left home and disappeared. It is known that she did receive a letter that morning, which she said was from a "woman friend," and which evidently disturbed her greatly.

The reward is offered by Thomas J. Gleason and other friends of Miss McCann.

Coincidently with the reward offer, it became known that the W. C. T. U. has turned its powerful organization to the task of intensifying Police Chief Wilmot in the search for the girl, with a view to starting a nation-wide crusade against the white slave traffic, of which the girl may be a fallen victim.

Mrs. Wray and the child were found by Mr. Wray when he came home from his work at 8:30 a. m. The bodies were found in Mrs. Wray's bedroom, the child in its crib and Mrs. Wray on the floor in an attitude of prayer.

An examination showed the deaths to have been among the most tragic in the history of the city. Mrs. Wray had probably arisen to do her housework. It being dark she turned on the gas. Before she could light the gas she had been stricken.

Falling to the floor, unable to move or cry for aid, she was found by her husband, whose arrival was in time to save the other children.

ROUND UP FIRE SURVIVORS FOR COUNTY PROBE

The Boston police today ordered property holders throughout the city to make a thorough and immediate cleaning up of all buildings, particularly with reference to fire escapes.

The police told the property owners they will be summoned into court and will face jail sentences if they further violate the laws regarding rubbish and obstructions in entrances and exits. This house to house canvass came as the final warning from the police, and is the result of the Arcadia fire horror, in which twenty-eight lost their lives.

The first warning was given last week after the Arcadia fire. Today's action marks the most drastic crusade of the kind ever conducted by the Boston police.

WALSH PLANS LAW TO GOVERN RESIGNATIONS

Governor-elect Walsh today commented on the scheme to have officials whose terms would expire under his administration, resign this month so that Governor Foss could fill their places, by saying:

"I will probably ask the next Legislature to pass a law providing that the resignation of officials who resign between the election and inauguration of a Governor shall not take effect until his inauguration.

"Behind this is a deliberate purpose to let the present regime control the Public Utilities Commission and other bodies during my term."

The resignation of Judge Morton of the Supreme Bench, and the proposed resignation of George W. Bishop of the Public Utilities Commission, would allow Governor Foss to make two important appointments.

Today Dr. George H. Janes, medical examiner of Hampton County, resigned. His term expires January 10.

Mr. Walsh does not hold Mr. Foss directly responsible, but does say that the Governor, by naming men to fill vacancies created by recent resignations, has become indirectly responsible.

SEAL VERDICT, THEN 1 JUROR CHANGES MIND

An incident never before recorded in Massachusetts jurisprudence was noted in the Superior Court today, Judge White presiding, when a juror, after agreeing to a sealed verdict, declared at the opening of court today that he had changed his mind over night and was now of a different opinion.

Coleman Wilson was the juror. He is a laborer, living at No. 33 School street, Charlestown.

The case was the suit of Edward Morey, a minor, against the Boston Elevated for $25,000, for the loss of a leg and other injuries. A verdict for the defence was reached. The case went to the jury at 11:30 Tuesday morning. At adjournment that day they were still out.

Some time during the night a verdict was reached and signed by the twelve men. This was sealed. This morning it was handed to the clerk of court by the foreman.

Before the formality of reading the verdict was completed Wilson cried out: "I'm opposed to it. I was the last one to agree to it and did so only for the sake of peace."

Wilson said that after he had gone home he thought the matter over he decided to change his vote.

Judge White, after a conference, refused to record the verdict. The defence noted exceptions. The case will now go to the full bench on the question of not recording the verdict.

Wilson was excused from further jury duty. "I do not think there would be any confidence placed in your actions from this out," said Judge White.

WIDOWS PROPOSE TO FRESNO DAN

Russell Heir Swamped with Letters from Women Who Would Lighten His Cares.

Fresno Dan Russell faced the continuent nationwide of proposals today without flinching. He even smiled while he read passages from some of his proposals and discussed each correspondent, pro and con, with the reporters.

The letters were many and varied. Widows were in the lead so far as numbers went. Widows—usually with grown sons—felt that Fresno Dan would be glad of some one to take care of him now that he has a lot of financial worries. One correspondent wished him a "long and sensible life." Another said she could "tell by your face you would be good to a woman."

Out of them all, one letter stood highest in Fresno's heart at latest bulletins today. This letter came from South Boston, and without only the signature—is here reproduced:

Has Money for Both.

Dear Fresno Dan:

From the first time I saw your picture in the papers I knew you were the right heir to the Russell fortune. Also from that very day I knew you were the man for my own true love. I have started to write to you often, but haven't had the courage until now.

You say you have no money, but that doesn't matter.

Money is no object to me. I have enough for both of us to live on for the rest of our lives either in one of my own houses or on one of my father's ranches in the West.

I am young and am considered handsome, with a perfect figure. I am five feet, 135 pounds in my bathing suit. If you desire my picture or want to see me personally let me know as soon as possible. Hoping to hear from you as the one man for my true love, I remain your loving friend.

Best Letter of the Lot.

Fresno read this, smiled and commented: "That's the best of the lot! "Blondes, blondes, blondes," he mouned "nothing but blondes. But though I prefer dark women, a blonde would do in a pinch.

"I guess some of them are looking for that money. I'd like to see some of it myself. Almy has only given me $75 since I came back for the funeral. Pretty hard times trying to swing the reputation of a millionaire on a stingy allowance.

"I guess I'll invite them all out here to the house and take my pick, although I'm in no hurry to get married. By waiting a while I may get a better wife. I'm beginning to think there is hope for all bachelors if a man with my face can get a wife."

Here are two other letters, both from widows:

Widow With Three Grown Sons.

South Lawrence, December 9.

Dear Sir—I am a widow, forty-eight years old, and have been so for ten years. I have had a hard time keeping my home and rearing three boys, but with God's strength I have done it.

I am not foolish enough not to know that there will be someone else

Married Twice in Six Years.

Brooklyn, Dec. 9.

My Dear Fresno: I am forty years old, blessed with perfect health and not bad looking. I have home and home duties. Although I have almost been married twice in the last six years I am still single and looking for a good genuine man. I am a home money, but would enjoy a good sensible companion. I am not extravagant, but fond of the good things of life. I am a brunette, 5-foot-5 inches tall. I'm proud to have a pleasant disposition. If you really want a wife as the papers say you do, I would like to meet you.

If you are at all interested in the matter, let me hear from you at once. I like your picture, and think you would be good to an opportunities woman. If my letter appears to you, call me on the telephone either Monday or Tuesday evening, between 6 and 7 o'clock or any time in the afternoon. Call me by phone, not by mail, and perhaps we could be good friends. I have no more friends, as most men are not sensible enough to suit me.

A WARNING TO MANY

Some Interesting Facts About Kidney Troubles

Few people realize to what extent their health depends upon the condition of the kidneys.

The physician in nearly all cases of serious illness makes a chemical analysis of the patient's urine. He knows that unless the kidneys are doing their work properly, the other organs cannot readily be brought back to health and strength.

When the kidneys are neglected or abused in any way, serious results are sure to follow. According to health statistics, Bright's disease, which is really an advanced form of kidney trouble, caused nearly ten thousand deaths in 1912 in the state of New York alone. Therefore it behooves us to pay more attention to the health of these most important organs.

An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

The mild and healing influence of this preparation, in most cases, is soon realized, according to sworn statements and verified testimony of those who have used the remedy.

If you feel that your kidneys require attention and wish a sample bottle, write to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper, enclose ten cents, and they will gladly forward it to you by Parcel Post.

Swamp-Root is sold by every druggist in bottles of two sizes—50c and $1.00.

DIGNOWITY'S FORMER WIFE WEDS BROKER

SEVEN YEARS ADVENTURES OF EX-MRS. DIGNOWITY

On November 5, 1906, Miss Marion St. Clair Whittemore eloped to Providence and became the wife of James V. Dignowity.

Four days later Colonel James V. Dignowity of San Antonio, Tex., who cut off his son when he eloped, forgave the couple.

Suit for $10,000 was filed in August, 1910, by Mrs. Dignowity against the Frank J. McPeake Company, alleging that her husband had lost that amount at gambling tables.

Mrs. James V. Dignowity was granted a divorce at Dedham on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment on December 9, 1910.

Mrs. Dignowity was cited into the Poor Debtor's Court on February 11, 1911, by L. S. Rosen & Co., who had a dressmaking bill against her for $225.

Mrs. James V. Dignowity, Jr., whose elopement with young Dignowity, known in 1906 as the richest student in Harvard University, created a sensation in Greater Boston at the time, is the wife of John E. McCanna, a Hub broker.

The honeymoon suite is at No. 9 Hammond terrace, Allston.

The wedding took place in a private suite at the Hotel Somerset on the afternoon of October 8. News of the ceremony has just come to light.

The marriage was performed by Robert M. McKeish of No. 394 K street, South Boston, justice of the peace.

Mrs. Dignowity and McCanna had been friends for years. It had been reported several times that they were married.

The marriage return filed at the Boston registry reads: John E. McCanna, twenty-eight, single, of No. 1426 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, real estate broker, born in Boston and son of Edward F. and Catherine Maguire-McCanna, was married at Boston on October 8, 1913, to Marion W. Dignowity, nee Whittemore, divorced, of Brookline, no occupation, born in Cambridge and daughter of Mr. John St. C. Whittemore and Fannie Burne Whittemore.

Mrs. McCanna was graduated at Wellesley College in 1906. Four years after her marriage to Dignowity she filed a divorce libel alleging cruelty and intoxication. A decree was handed down in her favor in December, 1910, giving her custody of her children.

During the pending of the suit Mrs. Dignowity created a sensation by filing a suit for $40,000 against the Riding and Driving Club of Watertown, seeking to recover money which, she alleged, had been lost by her husband in gambling at the club.

GOVERNMENT PLANS TO OWN WIRE SYSTEMS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Postmaster-General Burleson today strongly intimated that the administration would give its support to the preparation of government ownership of telephone and telegraph companies.

Mr. Burleson said that his own mind was open on the subject and added: "I have taken up the matter with President Wilson and he also has an open mind. There will be no hasty action, but I believe we will arrive at a conclusion on this subject that will meet with the people's approval. I shall have something to say on the question in my annual report.

"We are carrying on an investigation of government ownership of the facilities in European nations. When we begin to think of taking over for ourselves property valued at from one hundred to three hundred millions of dollars we see how gigantic the project is and we must make haste slowly. Everybody's right must be protected."

While no definite program has been formulated a preliminary survey is being made and indications point to considerable congressional support under the leadership of Representative David J. Lewis of Maryland.

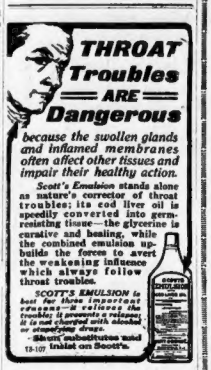
Grotto died before he reached the hospital. Sario's condition is dangerous.



THROAT Troubles ARE Dangerous
because the swollen glands and inflamed membranes often affect other tissues and impair their healthy action.
Scott's Emulsion stands alone as nature's corrector of throat troubles; its cod liver oil is speedily converted into germ-resisting tissue—the glycerine is carative and healing, while the combined emulsion upbuilds the forces to avert the weakening influence which always follow throat troubles.
SCOTT'S EMULSION is best for those important reasons—it relieves the throat promptly, is relished, it is not charged with alcohol or stimulating drugs.
Absent substitutions and insist on Scott's.

PREDICT MORE PURITY ARRESTS IN EAST BOSTON

More arrests were predicted in East Boston today to follow the conviction of Edward Cady, seventeen, of No. 101 Maverick street, East Boston. He pleaded guilty before Judge McLaughlin in the Superior Court to attacking three little East Boston girls, whom he had bribed with sums varying from ten to twenty-five cents.

Cady's sentence has been deferred.

Cady's arrest followed an investigation by officers of East Boston of charges made against him by the three girls.

Dreaming of Days When Appetite Was King

Bring Back Those Joyous Health Laden Days By Using a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After Meals.

One of the sad memories of a stomach sufferer are the days when he could eat the meals that others ate. He recalls the joy and the relish of many special dishes, but to attempt the same thing now would be followed by distress, if not painful suffering.

Just a single Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet eaten like candy after a meal will assist in quickly and harmlessly digesting such a meal. In a brief time the faulty digestion will become normal and man may eat as he desires.

"And Now I Can Only Eat Soft, Mushy Diet."

Then the occasional use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will bring to any one a more enjoyable and comfortable feeling after a large meal than one can possibly imagine.

The entire secret of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from a successful digestion standpoint lies in the fact that they are composed of those elements which the system needs most and would supply if it could.

Don't delay. Go to your druggist and obtain a box this very day. Price 50 cents.

Now Is the Time When the Facilities of a Great Modern Store Like This Are Most Appreciated

IT PAYS TO KEEP IN TOUCH WITH THE SIEGEL STORE

We've Reproduced a Canadian Winter Carnival in One of Our Big Washington Street Windows

Come and See Canadians at Play

It is a mechanical marvel. There are miniature people really skating with all the motions of life on an ice-covered lake; tobogganing, snow-shoeing and skiing over great, glistening, snow-covered hills, and the ice palace aglow with lights. It gives you a vivid picture of Winter sports in Canada.

Grown-ups and children alike are fascinated by this and the other wonders of this great Christmas store.

A giant windmill, made entirely from handkerchiefs, with its great wings really turning, is another feature of our elaborate main floor decorations.

Other Things of Interest

A real live circus in Toyland, Santa Claus making his Christmas candy, a wonderful Christmas tree all lighted up, the children in Toyland.

All of them worth coming to see.

"You don't have to wait for elevators in this store," said one woman. "The escalators take you to every shopping floor." That's true, but with eight big passenger elevators running there isn't much waiting there, either. Then, too, the broad aisles and the handy arrangement of Christmas stocks make shopping so much pleasanter. Sidewalks are broader here than in many other parts of the shopping district. Less crowding, and best of all, you can buy everything you want for the home or personal needs all gathered under one roof.

Exciting Times in Toyland These Days

All kinds of funny things happening on every side, and, of course, where there are so many animals, some of them are bound to get into trouble. The elephant strayed into the big railroad yard and all the trains coming and going confused him, with the sad result pictured above, but the Toyland wrecking crew have cleared the tracks, and trains are whizzing by on time again, and Santa Claus fixed the elephant up just as good as new. Just beyond the railroad yard is the big doll village with its stores, its shops and its beautiful houses.

After the children have seen all of the wonderful things that Santa Claus has made, take them to see powerful stupefying drugs, cause girls to become dizzy and ill, falling easy victims to white slavers.

NATION WIDE WAR ON "POISON NEEDLE" MEN

W. C. T. U. Takes Action.

The action of the W. C. T. U. was one of the big developments of the day. In a resolution adopted at their Washington convention they declared that they are "alarmed at the deadly work of the Needle gang," and they ask the President to set federal investigators on the case.

Armand Megaro, drug clerk, who was placed under $20,000 bail for an alleged attack with a "poisoned needle" on Mrs. Marjorie Graff of Brooklyn, in a Newark Theatre, has been released on $1,000 bail.

Ranking in intense interest with the disappearance of Dorothy Arnold, a case which the police have never solved, developments in the McCann case within the last forty-eight hours have brought out striking parallels between the two cases, which make many persons fear the fate of the latest missing girl, unless speedily revealed, will never be known.

Family Cheerful.

Miss McCann's parents, and particularly her sister Ethel, a girl of eighteen, profess to be confident that Jessie will return home within ten days or two weeks. There is even a hint in their manner of voicing this belief, that they have some definite idea of where she is and why she is remaining away from home.

This was true of the Arnold family for weeks after the disappearance of Dorothy Arnold.

Inspector Faurot, chief of the New York detective bureau, is of the same mind. He has a theory upon which he is working, and which predicates the return of Miss McCann before many days. So, too, thought and said the head of the detective bureau while his men were scouring the country for Dorothy Arnold.

Moreover, as in the Arnold affair, clews are cropping up in more than one city. Reports are coming in that Jessie McCann has been seen by various persons, mostly friends of the family.

Seen at Coney Island.

One version is that she was seen at Coney Island twice within two days by neighbors who have lived near the McCanns for some time and knew Jessie well. Another was that she had been seen in a telephone booth at a Coney Island drug store.

Still another, from the same section, asserted that a girl answering to Miss McCann's description, has stopped for three days at a Brighton Beach hotel.

A fourth clew has carried the police as far away as Philadelphia, where it said that a friend of the McCanns had met Jessie on Chestnut street last Sunday.

Needless to say, all these clews are being vigorously run down, but some of them have already been exploded and the others have yielded nothing of satisfactory nature to police in their endeavor to clear up the mystery.

Vain Search of Morgues.

The morgues and hospitals of Greater New York have been ransacked without avail. On the possibility that Miss McCann, while in a fit of nervous melancholia, might have thrown herself into the ocean at Coney Island, the waters around the Summer resort are being searched today.

The rumor that Miss McCann was seen in a Coney Island drug store less than twenty-four hours ago, has lured detectives thither and they are making a house-to-house canvas of the resort in the hope of finding some trace of the missing young woman.

Always bearing in mind the recently discovered activities of the "needlemen" through the action of Mrs. Marjorie Graff in carrying into court the assault upon her in a Newark moving picture theatre last week, the police are exerting themselves to the utmost to locate Miss McCann and the four other girls or young married women whose disappearance they have yet to explain.

NEEDLE WORKER SOUGHT VICTIMS IN STORES OF BOSTON

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It seems to me of the utmost importance that experiences like the known by women and girls:

A young woman after a hard morning of shopping in Boston stopped into a reputable drug store for an "egg shake." While the drink was being prepared she noticed a woman standing next to her who was watching her closely. She gave the matter but little thought, but suddenly felt a stinging sensation in her arm. She was alarmed at once, and seeing a policeman in the street, rushed out to him, and quickly saying, "Something has happened to me! I'm fainting! get me to a hospital," she became unconscious. The mark of a hypodermic syringe was found on her arm.

A young woman went to the waiting room of one of our largest stores where she was to meet her mother. The room was crowded and after a few minutes she suddenly felt a prick in her arm. She had heard of this devilish trick, and going at once to the matron she said: "I'm going to faint! Don't let anyone touch me but my mother! She'll be here soon!" She then lost consciousness. At this moment a man stepped up, crying, "Why, my sister has fainted! I'll call a taxi!" But the girl's mother fortunately got in an appearance, and, in the confusion the man disappeared in the crowd.

It seems to me that the press cannot give too much publicity to this great danger.

Yours truly,
PRO BONO PUBLICO.

All Union Printing for Me, Says Curley

Editor AMERICAN:

My attention has been directed to an article appearing in your issue of today, December 9, relative to the banner announcing the candidacy for Mayor of James M. Curley not bearing the union label.

Business Agent Walsh of the Sign Painters' Union ignored me with a cold fadge and it was proven to his satisfaction that James M. Curley, candidate for Mayor, has in his possession a contract calling for the union label upon all work that has been done for him. It is needless for me to say that I am a firm believer in the principles of organized labor, always my help in every public body in which I have served has ever been cast in favor of organized labor.

Respectfully yours,
JAMES M. CURLEY.

Chicago Egg Fight Goes to U. S. Court

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—The suit to dissolve the Chicago butter and egg board as a monopoly in restraint of trade was taken into federal court today. Master Charles B. Morrison appeared in court with his report on the evidence against the board gathered during hearings which began last Summer. The price of eggs in Chicago was unchanged today. The boycott of housewives forcing storage eggs from 45 cents a dozen to 25 cents, but holders refused to part with their stores for less than that figure. According to egg dealers today the continued cold weather will send the price back to 45 cents or higher. The Grand Jury today was in possession of the books of the four largest storage houses in Chicago.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2

This plan makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually conquers an ordinary cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchial asthma.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every hour, two or three hours.

Pinex is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The prompt results from this mixture have endorsed it to thousands of homewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A Novel Free Holiday Spectacle

On the Second Floor of Our Main Store Representing a Christmas Fair

In Old Nuremberg

One of the most beautiful and interesting Christmas spectacles ever shown in Boston is the real German Christmas Village Costume Fair in Old Nuremberg which has been transported to a portion of the second floor in our Main Store.

Once inside the gates of Old Nuremberg you will imagine yourself in some quaint old German village of the eighteenth century. There are the ancient buildings, the open village square where the fair is in progress. There, too, are the village maidens, in their odd looking Nuremberg peasant costumes, ready to serve you and tell you all about the hundreds of attractions at their fair. Be sure to see Old Nuremberg—it is entirely free.

The Greatest Feature of This Christmas Fair

The Six Performing Polar Bear Brothers

BIG BROTHER BEAR.

The great feature of the Fair in Old Nuremberg, the chief show of all the shows at the fair, is given by the six performing who have brought down their wonderful Shop of Christmas Prize Package Toys direct from the North Pole. These are not real live Polar Bears, you know, but you will almost believe they are alive when you see them.

Polar Bear Brothers

No child need be afraid of the Polar Bear Brothers! They love little children, and now let us tell you exactly what they do.

Mystery Packages for 25c

Each boy or girl who visits Old Nuremberg on the Second Floor of the Main Store has the right to buy a Prize Package Toy for 25 cents from the Polar Bears.

Big Bear Takes the Money

First he hands his quarter to the Big Brother Bear, and this sets the mechanism in motion. Big Brother Bear waves a signal to the Little Brother Bear way up near the big iceberg. The mysterious prize package drops out of a cave in the iceberg into a tray held by the first Polar Bear, who passes it to the next Bear and he in turn to another Bear—and so it comes down the line from the Northland to the last Big Brother Bear, who gives it to the boy or girl who paid for it.

Both Boys and Girls

No indeed, you don't know what you are going to get until you open it—that's the best part of the fun. But you are sure to get a fine 25c toy—well worth the price—for a Girl, if a Girl buys it, and if a Boy gives the quarter, then it will be a Toy for a Boy. You will see what good judgment the Polar Bear Brothers use in their selection of these prize toys for Boys and Girls!

How to See the Polar Bears

The only way to see the Six Polar Bear Brothers is to visit the Fair in Old Nuremberg Village. The only entrance to Old Nuremberg is from the Second Floor of the Main Store, in the section formerly occupied by the untrimmed millinery, which has been moved over with the trimmed millinery till after Christmas.

Christmas Gifts at the Fair

Of course, there is no end of Christmas merchandise at The Fair in Old Nuremberg—that's what a Christmas Fair is for, isn't it? The saleswomen and girls are all dressed in the picturesque costumes of Old Nuremberg.

A PRETTY NUREMBERG GIRL.

Among the things sold at The Fair are:

Largest Toy Store in Boston

Remember, The Christmas Fair at Old Nuremberg is separate and distinct from our Big Toy Store. It's an entirely different show, in a different building. Old Nuremberg is in the Main Store on the Second Floor.

The Big Toy Store, the largest Toy Store in New England, is in the New Building on the Third Floor. There you will find the real live Santa Claus, the Doll that Swims, the Leaping Tiger, the big Doll Houses and thousands of other toys.

If little stomach is sour, liver torpid and bowels clogged.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful today often saves a sick child tomorrow.

If your little one is out of sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

Ford Explains Use of Name "Adams"

By BERT FORD.

Knowles charged me with using the name "Adams" while hunting him in the Maine woods. I did use that name, BUT ONLY ON ONE OCCASION. The single exception was to trip up Knowles' official guide, Allie Deming, who came around "gum-shoeing" for information.

On that day I learned a Boston newspaper had telegraphed to the Knowles camp that "Ford of the AMERICAN" was on the job.

"Watch out for Deming," said a sympathizer. "He's coming around for news. Knowles' bunch is scared blue."

Two hours later, around strolled Deming.

"Say, is your name Adams?" said Allie.

"Yep," said I, winking at my guide, James G. Harlow.

"And you come from New York, don't you?"

"Right again, Allie."

"Say, I know a lot of fellows over there. New York is some town. I'd like to write to you and call on you there, and send you something from the woods some time. Will you write down your address in my book?"

I knew what he wanted, so I jotted down "Bert Adams, No. 258 Broadway New York," and told Allie not to forget "to tell Knowles' manager to send me a line also."

From the time I arrived on the scene I registered under the name of Ford. I received express parcels under that name. I registered as "Ford" at all camps and hotels and have affidavits to prove it. In the above case alone was the bold and terrible "Alias Adams" used.

END INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, GAS, SOUR STOMACH—PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN

Time it! In five minutes your upset stomach will feel fine.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach troubles have made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store, and then, if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lies like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember, as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach, all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorder is a revelation to those who try it.

LEWIS ALLEN BRAVES 'WILD MAINE WOODS'

tender and edible, so I had nearly enough to satisfy the appetite of a neurotic canary.

The Mosquito Chase.

Just at dusk, as I was wandering through the forest, a large mosquito found me. Trumpeting to his mates, they started the chase, and only by burying myself in a mound of pine needles was I able to escape them. It is all right to spread blankets over pine needles and sleep on them, but to curl up in them "au naturel" is something else again. You feel all over just the way your foot feels when it is asleep.

Tuesday—I never believed there were so many living things in the deep woods. I have heard about the silent forests, but I was awakened at a cold, gray dawn by the screeching of birds, barking of squirrels, and I think even the fish in the pond nearby squealed a little. I hastened to the bank of a stream and kneeled to drink, but the bank caved in, and I plunged into the icy water. Tell Perry for me that he doesn't know what it is to be really cold. Our here in a mountain stream at daybreak, with nothing to wear but goose-flesh, an Eskimo would freeze to death. I ran around and around for an hour to get warm, but had to stop because that gave me an appetite, and I would have gladly paid $100 for just a Turkish towel.

Of all fool bliss, this playing at primitive man is the limit. If I had the man here who suggested this scheme I would wallop him so hard all his relations would be in the hospital a week. Of course I had to eat. Still, if I had my choice between a meat-sack overcoat and a planked tenderloin, I'd take the meat-sack. Hot on the shore of the pond I saw a frog. Great idea! With a pole I walloped a dozen of them, and with the aid of a sharp rock and my fingernails I dressed those frog legs. Then I got some dry sticks and rubbed them together until I rubbed all the skin from my knuckles and wore out five sticks. Finally I got a spark of fire, blew this into a flame, hung the legs on a stick and broiled them.

Frogs, but No Salt.

Believe me, I have paid as high as $22 for a dinner, but it wasn't one-eighth as good as that meal. Of course I realize that Nature made a grave mistake in not growing frogs with salt on their legs, and I wouldn't have minded if I could have had a canteloupe, some toast and eggs and coffee and chops and things to go with them, but I felt better after eating, and the only faux pas I made was attempting to put my hand in my pocket for money to tip the waiter.

I found a big bed of moss and went to sleep. I must have been tired, for that is all I remembered until some one stepped on me the next morning. It was a bear!

Wednesday—That made at least five bears, or lions, counted phonetically. I emitted a yell and started to climb a tree. It was a pine tree and full of pitch, which aided me considerably in getting up. When the bear stepped on me I said "Woof!" Then I yelled, and the bear said "Woof!" By the time I was halfway up the tree the bear was crossing the Canadian border. I waited an hour and then came down. Did you ever climb a sticky pine tree wearing nothing except a few shreds of moss in your hair? What's the use? You wouldn't understand it, and I couldn't describe it.

Caught two turtles and some more frogs. Dissected turtle with a fifty-pound rock. Made a drinking cup of birch bark—happy idea. Tomorrow I will build me a birch bark suit. Dust has gathered in the spots of pitch on me, and my only fear is some hunter will shoot me for a spotted leopard.

Thursday—Those birch bark suits are a failure. I made a dandy one, but as I was broiling frog legs it caught fire. I leaped into the pond, otherwise your correspondent would have been a dark lump of ashes on the Maine map.

Am proud of myself. By sharpening a turtle shell on a rock I made a hook, and with some wild grapevine managed to catch a trout. That trout was fine, and I made some real fish hooks out of his backbone. I now have a big fire going all the time, as it takes me about six hours rubbing dry sticks together to make a fire.

Friday—Eureka! I now have a dandy suit. Made it from the bearded moss that hangs from trees. Tied it on with wild grapevine. Now I look like an old felt mattress that Towser has been chewing on for a week, but am considerably warmer.

Saturday—I am some eighteen miles deeper in the woods. I saw a party of campers today arrive at the pond with several ladies. Here in my camp I built a little hut out of broken branches, lined it with moss, made a big fireplace and expected to be quite comfortable. I would have been, too, for four things, namely:

Built my camp on the nest of some red ants;

Poison ivy grows luxuriantly all about;

A large black snake tried to shake hands with me;

The foliage was so dry it caught fire from the fire-place and burned up my camp.

By leaping into the stream I saved myself, but my moss suit is destroyed.

I may stay here another week, and I may go back and wait until those campers hang out some clothes, steal them and hurry back.

P. S.—Did you ever make a pipe out of acorns and hollow weed stems and try to smoke sweet fern?

It is about as enjoyable as a drink of water at a German picnic.

More of Lewis Allen's messages in tomorrow's AMERICAN.

Be sure to read the big instalment of that greatest newspaper feature—The Truth About Knowles, or the Real Adventures of the "Doctor Cook of the Maine Woods," which will be printed in next Sunday's AMERICAN. New and startling facts in the case against Knowles will be told next Sunday. Tell your newsdealer NOW that you must have next Sunday's AMERICAN.

DON'T TAKE FORD'S WORD FOR IT, JUST LISTEN TO JOE KNOWLES

Statement by Joseph Knowles published in Boston—August 24, 1913:

I decided to visit my trap in the morning. There was my bear tearing around and pacing back and forth at the bottom of the pit. The more he would dig at the bottom the more secure the pit became and the less the chances to scale the sides.

Now read this statement by Joseph Knowles, published in the same newspaper last Sunday, December 7, 1913, in his own defence:

Such a pit as I built and Ford found and described will easily catch a bear in the Maine woods. The pit was plenty deep enough to hold a bear. I dug the hole three and one-half to four feet deep, with cover of dry timber, loaded with stone of weight sufficient to hold a grizzly.

Henry E. Redmond, a trapper of thirty-five years' experience, says:

That marble hole wouldn't hold a cat. It is the most absurd bear rigging I ever saw.

"PRINCESS" JESSIE GOES A-SHOPPING

LONDON, Dec. 10.—"Princess Jessie," as Mrs. Francis B. Sayre already is being called, and her husband, whenever they have appeared in public, have made a host of friends by their unaffected manner and their keen interest in London settlement work.

Mrs. Sayre succumbed to the fascination of the Bond street shops' Christmas display. After a short automobile drive around the West End with her husband she induced him to accompany her on a pilgrimage afoot down London's narrow but opulent "vanity fair."

They made a few small purchases for Christmas gifts and returned to Grosvenor Square just in time for the lunch given by Miss Page in honor of the bride. The guests were mainly English friends of the hostess.

Mr. Page returned to London on an early train, but the Sayres remained at Cambridge sightseeing and inspecting the ancient college buildings and will return tonight.

HUERTA'S ARMY DESERTING AS REBELS ADVANCE

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 10.—Scores of Federal soldiers upon whom General Huerta relied to keep his capital out of the hands of the Zapatistas are deserting daily and joining the rebels.

It became known today that some of the most trusted men in Mexico City and Cuernavaca garrisons had decamped with large quantities of ammunition. This was a severe blow to the government, whose resources are steadily dwindling.

Desperate fighting is still going on south of Cuernavaca. This is the fourth day of the battle there. The Federals under General Castro have thus far held their own, but have been unable to gain any decided advantage. A large rebel force led by the bandit Nork is marching from Puebla to aid Zapata and if he arrives in time the government army will undoubtedly have to retire.

The action of Congress in declaring the election of Huerta illegal is expected to make no change in the situation here.

Without food, with little ammunition and worn with a march of one hundred miles across the worst of Mexican desert, the entire Federal army of Northern Mexico, under Generals Mercado, Salazar, Orozco and Caraveo, is at Ojinaga today making its last stand against the forces of General Villa, the rebel leader of the north.

BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL NEWS---Edited By Experts

Latest in Today's Stock Markets

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were higher with few exceptions this afternoon and although the price range had lacked breadth, the tendency was upward most of the time from the start. The declaration of the regular New York Central quarterly dividend tended to make the market firmer.

Much uncertainty prailed as to what action New Haven directors would take upon that road's dividend. The Boston News Bureau said: "We can make De positive statement that if present plans of the most influential members of the New Haven directorate prevail at this afternoon's meeting, the dividend will be 'deferred.'"

In the afternoon in the local market Boston Elevated was up 1½, the acceptance of the new time schedule by carmen having been uplifting to the stock. New Haven was up ¼, at 72, and Boston & Maine off ¼, at 43¼. United Fruit was ½ higher and American Telephone half a point. There was not much movement to copper issues.

In New York at that time Canadian Pacific was down 2¾, New Haven ¼, and Mexican Petroleum common 1½. The latter had slumped 6 in early trading. Gains included Southern Pacific ½, Union Pacific ¼, Erie ¼, Reading ¼, Lehigh Valley ¼, New York Central ⅝, American Can ½, Steel ⅜, Amalgamated ⅜, and Pennsylvania ⅛.

New Haven Depressed Market.

Fear that New Haven directors would pass the quarterly dividend remained a depressing factor when the New York market opened, although it was argued they probably would keep the stock on a dividend basis of at least 4 per cent, per annum to render the road's bonds available for purchase by savings banks. This issue opened unchanged, added and rallied. It was comparatively firm all the morning. Canadian Pacific was still weak. The passing of the preferred dividend caused a slump in Mexican Petroleum common. There was no disturbance because of unsettled conditions in Mexico.

The report by the United States Steel Corporation that unfilled tonnage on its books at the end of November totalled 4,266,347 tons, a decrease of 117,420 compared with October 31 figures, was about what had been expected. Steel stock was firm and a little higher.

Sales of Copper Metal.

Amalgamated ranged upward, but several other leading copper issues sustained small losses, although it was reported that between 25,000,000 and 30,000,000 pounds of electrolytic were sold in Europe yesterday at 14¾ cents a pound. This price does not coincide with a London embargo reported today stating that metal is being offered on the Continent at 14.30 cents and at 14⅜ in London. It is questioned if foreign sales were at a better price than 14⅜. Nothing in the metal is reported in this country.

Stock Market Not So Active.

Stock markets were not as active today as yesterday up to the afternoon. Trading in Americans was dull in London, where they were irregular until the end. Canadian Pacific continued weak there.

The reassuring statement was that commission house buying was on a larger scale than has been usual of late. It was thought by many traders that the market had again become oversold. It was also incorrectly reported that the Imperial Bank of Germany had reduced its minimum rate of discount from 5½ to 5 per cent. This would be considered, if true, convincing evidence either that the monetary situation has improved in Europe or, as is the case in the United States, there has been marked contraction in trade in Germany.

Financial News in Brief.

The London copper warrants market was quiet this morning, with spot 2s 6d lower and futures unchanged. At the close spot was 2s 6d lower and futures were up 1s. 3d. Sales were 300 tons of spot and 1,000 of futures.

According to fortnightly statistics regarding idle cars in this country and Canada, the surplus of freight cars on December 1 was 37,254, compared with only 22,652 reported two weeks earlier.

Senator Root says that the currency bill will be passed within a week and Senator Ottoman thinks it may be put upon its final passage by Saturday night. Negotiations are under way between Democrats and Republicans for unanimous consent as to the time. Republicans are said to be willing to agree to a date for the vote if Democrats will rescind the order for night sessions.

United Shoe Machinery directors have declared regular quarterly dividends of 1½ on the preferred and 2 per cent. on the common stock, payable January 5 to stock of record December 16.

BRILLIANT SHOW

Of money-making concerns for sale holds the attention of discriminative readers of Boston AMERICAN "Business Opportunities." Greatest Quantity-Quality Circulation.

COMMENT AND FACT ON TRADE AND FINANCE

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

Is your's a twenty-four hour job? Or do you get off with eight or ten hours a day?

Most of us common mortals, who are the rank and file, are too prone to envy bosses; to fancy that those at the top have an easy time, to imagine that because they can come and go as they please they can take all the leisure they want. Their money, we sometimes think, can banish all the troubles flesh is heir to. We see them jaunting off here and there, and remark, "What a fine time of it the bosses have."

Now the more I see of rich men, the closer I get to large employers and heads of big corporations, the less in love am I with their lot and the more I am inclined to reflect that the well-paid worker has fewer worries than those at the top.

Said the manager of an important concern to me: "I am a twenty-four hours a day man. I am at the beck and call of my business any hour of the day or night. If anything goes wrong no matter what the hour, I am called on the telephone and have to try to straighten things out. Sometimes when wakened in the night I wish I were again an ordinary workman.

"When a worker's day is finished he is through. He can go home to his wife and family and spend a quiet evening with them.

"His mind is not seething with business problems. He has not to rack his brain thinking of how to keep ahead of the procession, how to successfully meet the new moves of his rivals.

"Let me tell you it is not a bed of roses being the head of a big concern nowadays—especially since labor became so touchy."

This man's business goes on night and day it should be added.

* * *

A conversation I had some time ago with a young man at a railway station has haunted me ever since, although just why I cannot fathom. There was nothing extraordinary about it. Yet I have repeatedly felt that I simply must record it. And I won't be happy until I get rid of it!

* * *

I had visited the beautiful estate of a prominent banker one Saturday, and was waiting for a train. It was a cosy, moonlight evening. Everything was so quiet and peaceful—so different from the noisome metropolis. I spoke to a country youth—I had wisdom of some sort realdea in every human being, if only we can extract it, and often suggestions for these articles come from unsuspecting, inglorious Miltons."

* * *

"What a fine place Mr. So-and-So has," I ventured.

"Yes; I want there," he replied. "He is a good boss."

"How?"

And then he added with great earnestness:

"I wish I had his money!"

"So you think you would be very much happier?" I ventured. "I suppose to know Mr. ——— fairly well, I often see him in his office in the city, and I think he has quite a few worries at times."

He pondered for a little.

"Come to think of it, I suppose he has."

I waited.

* * *

"And, come to think of it, I haven't much. My job is easy. I get good pay. I'm off every evening."

* * *

There was another pause.

* * *

"Golly. I don't know, since you've mentioned it, if I could be very much better off if I did have his money. I guess I'm as happy as he is."

* * *

And then the train came.

Must I apologize for inflicting so commonplace a conversation upon you, busy readers? If so, I do. But somehow I feel better for having got it out of my system. It has refused to leave me in peace. It has compelled me to relate it.

* * *

May it not be that a good many of us are envious without stopping to analyze just why? If we knew a little more about the lot of the fellow we envy might we not be less anxious to change places with him?

* * *

Nearly every position of great responsibility is of the twenty-four hour a day variety. Shining success is seldom attained by an eight-hour day.

* * *

As for rich bosses, few of us—I hope—are foolish enough to envy them. They are of all men the most miserable. They cannot know the infinite, the incomparable joy, of creating something, of work well done. Without toil there can be no blissful relaxation or recreation.

Millions for Ads Urged by Willys

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The gospel of advertising was preached by John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, whose career has been one of the most absorbing romances of American business life.

At the Waldorf, where he was guest at a dinner given by the Sphinx Club, Mr. Willys announced that his firm, which expended $800,000 for advertising this year, will spend $1,500,000 for the same purpose during the coming year. This despite talk which he said he had heard in Wall street.

After brief optimistic speeches by prominent men, Mr. Willys said he would probably set aside $2,000,000 more for advertising, making the total for the ensuing year $2,000,000.

"I don't see anything the matter with this country," declared Mr. Willys. "I don't see any reason why we should be pessimistic. We are not going into bankruptcy tomorrow. I am not going to say my business is going to the dogs because a few people in Wall Street say conditions are bad.

"If times are going to be harder, let's work harder. Let's get up a little earlier in the morning and go to bed a little later at night. Let's do more advertising. We have found that advertising pays, that it pays to advertise continuously. We don't believe in halting our advertising during the dull season. We believe in keeping our name before the public twelve months in the year."

'SHOE TRADE PROSPEROUS,' SAYS F. B. RICE

"Tariff agitation did not injure our business during the last twelve months. We turned out more shoes this year than in 1912. I look for an equally good trade year in 1914," declared Fred B. Rice of Rice & Hutchins in an interview given the AMERICAN on business conditions as he finds them today.

The firm furnishes employment for fully 4,000 operatives, having seven factories scattered throughout the New England States. Its business is distributed throughout the entire country, and its good trade year cannot be credited to unusually brisk conditions of local selling.

"Don't ask me to explain all the whyfores and the wherefores of this optimistic trade shouting," Mr. Rice continued. "I am not a tariff expert. Neither am I sufficiently well informed on the pending currency bill or Mexican affairs to pose as an authority on those questions.

"My business is the manufacture and sale of shoes, which does not call for an abstract knowledge of all the popular questions of the day.

"As a matter of fact, I somehow think it is too early to say with any degree of certainty just what effect the tariff will have on the shoe trade, without attempting to predict its effect on the business of the country as a whole."

"But what about the social unrest of which other employers of labor complain?" he was asked.

"Why not put that question to some other man?" Mr. Rice interrupted, pleasantly, but decisively. "There are so many diversified views on what people call social unrest that one could not hope to care for one's own business if attempting to regulate the affairs of the universe.

"All that I care to say is that our volume of trade was somewhat heavier this year than it was in 1912, and that I look for equally good results in 1914, the tariff or other views of other employers to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Just say for me that the shoe business is a little above normal and that the prospects for the future are bright. Of that I am positive."

Shoe Men Discuss Fraudulent Advs.

"Fraudulent Advertising" was the subject of discussion at a meeting of the Boston Retail Merchants' Association at the Boston City Club. The speakers were Councilor James A. Watson, J. H. Quinn of Lynn and Joseph A. Pridday, president of the Chamber of Commerce Advertising Vigilance Association.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder troubles you.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which excites the kidneys; they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will get fine. This famous Salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which every one should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION RITCHIE MEETS TOMMY MURPHY IN CHAMPIONSHIP BOUT TONIGHT

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

PRESIDENT FULTZ DENIES CHAMPION ATHLETICS HAVE QUIT PLAYERS' FRATERNITY

TENER ASSUMES DUTIES AS NEW LEAGUE CHIEF

By SAM CRANE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—While we greet John K. Tener as the new president of the National League with open hands, still we have a handclasp for the retiring president—Tom Lynch.

Lynch has been loyal—none more so. He was more or less handicapped by Ban Johnson the perpetual president and deservedly so of the American League. And yet Tom Lynch did more to uphold the prestige and dignity of the organization than any other man could have under the same conditions.

But, bully for Tener, we say, and shout: "Long live the King," and we wish the new leader of the National League all the success that he and the great national game deserve.

President Tener arrived here today and will immediately assume his duties. He will attend a meeting of the national commission. Ban Johnson still being here for the purpose of greeting his new member of the supreme court of baseball, and after the Lajoie-McLean case, which remains to be settled, Tener and Secretary Heydler will confer on one of the Players Protective agreements. That be, have, who was at the Waldorf-Astoria, begs to say:

Dave is between a disturbance and a sweat as to how he is to present his player grievance. The national commission and the national board are the only ones both with the can get official recognition and nationwide. Dave is about as fed up as the "white plague." But Dave is persistent and will be on hand when called on—but when?

Eight Teams Now Tie in 6-Day Race

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Dec. 10.—But eight teams are now tied for first place as a result of a hard sprint led by Francis Verri, of the Italian team. Just as dawn filtered through the windows of the arena, the sickly light seemed to inspire the Italian, and with fresh life Verri set a hot pace which broke up the twelve team tie combination.

The Hansen and Anderson, Carmen and Cameron, Mitten and Thomas and Applehans and Peckebusch teams were caught unawares and lost a lap.

Verri kept hitting up the pace, and at 10 a. m. the fifty-eighth hour the eight leading teams were a mile and two laps ahead of the former record, having covered 1178 miles 3 laps.

Harvard Men to Run Boats in Cup Races

R. W. Emmons, 2d, C. F. Adams, 2d, and John Perkinson, Jr., "Generals" on Herreshoff Boat.

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

With three New England ship building plants now at work upon all three candidates for the defender of the America cup and two New England designers busily engaged with the details of the design, the attention of the yachting world is focussed today on Boston. Arrangements were completed today to build the third of the cup boats.

Boston men will be on the deck of whichever boat is selected to meet Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger. This has now been settled beyond any reasonable doubt.

It is also an assured fact that George Owen of Newton, who is designing the boat for the Clark syndicate of Philadelphia and New York yachtsmen, will have a hand in the handling of this boat in the trial races.

Mr. Owen is at Bath, Me., conferring with the builders. The hull will be of bronze. All other details are to be kept secret.

Mr. Owen is some skipper. He went over to the lakes the past Summer with the 31 rating boat Stranger from Providence which he had designed and, although the boat failed to bring home the Manhasset Bay trophy that the Western yachtsmen have had in their possession for some time, Owen and the Stranger kept everybody busy.

Father of Class P 31 Rating Boats.

He was the father of the Class P 31 rating boats in New England waters. This class has been raced every season around Marblehead and up and down the coast. It is one of the most popular classes now racing and new boats of this kind make their appearance every season.

In the Manhasset Bay cup races last Summer two of the boats were of Gardner's design and three were from the table of Owen.

Gardner, who is designing one of the cup contenders—the boat that will be built at Lawley's Neponset yard—had somewhat the better of the P boat racing on the lakes, but it was due primarily to a lack of proper tuning up of the Providence boat, which had been shipped by freight and then launched and raced almost as soon as it arrived at Chicago. All things being equal, the New England yachting men pin their faith to George Owen as being able to turn out a cup boat that will make the others race for all the "race" there is in them.

Boston Bankers on Herreshoff Boat.

The three "generals" aboard the Herreshoff boat will be Boston men in every sense of the word. It is a noticeable fact, too, this shift of reasoning over in New York. In years past New York has had considerable to say about the cup defender. The races next year will have Boston men aboard a cup boat known as the "ghost" of the New York Yacht Club, called so from the fact that the syndicate of men building the boat are four officers.

Robert W. Emmons, 2d, who is to be the managing director of the Herreshoff boat, is a Harvard man of the class of 1895, one of the best athletes that was ever at Cambridge, a State street banker, known the world over as one of the best amateur yachtsmen, and a member of the Eastern Yacht Club, Exchange Club, Tennis and Racquet Club, University Club, Automobile Club, New York Yacht Club, Harvard Clubs of Boston and New York and lives at No. 91 Beacon street.

Grandson of a President.

Charles Francis Adams 2d his assistant, is ex Mayor of the city of Quincy, treasurer of Harvard College, a director of many corporations and a grandson of President John Quincy Adams. He is a member of the Somerset, Eastern Yacht, Quincy Yacht, Massachusetts Yacht Racing Association and Harvard Clubs of Boston and New York. He married the daughter of the late Congressman William C. Lovering of Taunton and lives at No. 177 Commonwealth avenue. He graduated from Harvard in 1898.

John Perkinson, Jr., another Harvard man who will be one of the Boston trio on the Herreshoff boat, is a member of the New York Yacht Club, Norfolk Hunt Club, New Riding Club, Somerset Club, Tennis and Racquet Clubs, Harvard Clubs of Boston and New York and is a State street banker.

Pickwick Ale on tap

"What's your name, my friend?" said Sam.

"Job."

"And a very good name it is—only one I know that ain't got a nickname to it. Will you take a drop o' somethin' this morning?" replied Sam.

Job acquiesced in this agreeable proposal.

The next time anyone makes you "an agreeable proposal"—accept—and specify Pickwick Ale.

It is sold only on tap—never by the bottle—so you get all its delicious flavor.

It's the best answer to an agreeable proposal that you can give.

A THRILLING STORY OF SOCIETY BLACKMAILERS

You Can Begin This Great Story Today by Reading This First

Aline Graham, the beautiful daughter of U. S. District Attorney Gordon Graham, is beloved by Captain Lawrence Holbrook, a soldier of fortune, free lance and all-around good fellow. Aline loves him, but, because of some secret in her past, she refuses to marry him. When Holbrook is at her house she receives a telephone message from Judson Flagg, a lawyer and notorious blackmailer of society. Holbrook begs Aline to tell him her secret. She refuses and makes him leave her.

The message from Flagg has made her frantic. She finally decides to go to his house. In the meantime Holbrook, leaving the city, hears of a letter which he appears to have written. Congressman [illegible] Jones, a rival [illegible] receives a letter corresponding [illegible]

The tinge of the phone—"Hello hello! Yes, this is Mr. Flagg talking!" A passing smile of revolting cunning spread across the features of the spider. "Oh! It's you, is it? Wait a minute."

ALINE'S CALL

A secret nod and Tommy whisked the bewildered Jones into the next room.

And Flagg told a mysterious somebody at the other end of the line how wise she had been to call him—and how safe she would be to come to him now—how she would see nobody but him. And a little new dry was established to come to the web he had spun. Then the spider was well supplied with food and brandy, and [illegible] thoroughly [illegible]

"Do you want the letter, sir?" asked Jones in great surprise.

"Pshaw! Of course not. Have you all to myself."

"Tommy, take his name." He counted off the bills—and then with sudden [illegible] he asked. "Do you like good pictures?"

"Pictures, sir?" asked Jones in great surprise.

"Paintings. That's a fine one above the door."

Flattered by this attention, Jones turned. Flagg pushed a button in the desk—there was a flash—and a glare of light. Completely unnerved, Jones staggered back.

"What—what's—that?" To the bewildered intellect "that" seemed like a machination of Satan himself—and it was!

"Just a flashlight photograph of you in case you ever deny you were here."

"Good Gawd!" Jones fled the plague spot.

"His conscience is chasing him, Tommy."

Tommy laughed—to him his benefactor was a wonder. Judson was a marvelous [illegible] The boy began readjusting the [illegible]—getting ready for the next flash.

"It's late—my lad—" the growling bore [illegible] in bed—getting their beauty sleep. Now, as no beauty sleep would avail [illegible] Tommy—and he knew it—they both laughed again in perfect good fellowship. Flagg put his arm affection[illegible] around the boy, and took him to the doorway.

"You are a good boy, Tommy, and our uncle loves you."

"I love you, too—Uncle Jed."

Flagg patted the boy affectionately on the shoulder.

"Leave your window open, my boy, and get plenty of fresh air. Good night, boy."

"Good night."

Flagg led the portiere back and watched the boy go up the stairs. There was something almost monstrous in the way he watched the boy. He seemed [illegible] to [illegible] out of his sight. As if an afterthought, he called after the boy.

"And Tommy—when you grow up to [illegible] a great man, and write letters to the [illegible]—don't write them, Tommy!"

"I won't, Uncle Jed." The voice floated back, vaguely indistinct, from regions above.

And Flagg prepared himself to receive his fair visitor.

She was traveling through the streets furtively. Her trespass on usage had been a clandestine one, lest any one hear —and, hearing, know too much of what she proposed to risk—and gain—and lose that night.

The expected visitor was Aline!

As she traversed the streets, her heavy cloak in quick bursts to Larry Holbrook—is every account of her captain's [illegible] mellow, ringing voice—to the help that might have been here—if only she had dared to take it. She forced herself to be strong—to go on.

At last she reached the appointed house—the door was unlocked as she had been told, she met no one—as she had been promised—and alone entered the House of Doom. [illegible] a long hallway, flashed upon the door of a dimly lighted room—and stood alone, unprotected, a girl in the web of the master spider, Judson Flagg blackmailer and shyster lawyer.

"Mr. Flagg?" queried the girl, pushing aside the heavy curtains beyond the great oak door.

The man was standing at his desk examining a letter he had just taken from a japanned tin box. A satisfied smile played across his dark, crafty features—and the smile deepened in intensity as he looked up and saw the pretty girl he had drawn into his web of trickery and deceit. He was a connoisseur in all things beautiful—as the [illegible] hangings, hand-tooled books and rare paintings in his luxurious library testified.

The Coiffure of Refinement

Four Pretty Styles and as Many Pretty Girls

Specially Posed for This Page by Members of "The Madcap Duchess" Company

ADMIRATION of the latest in coiffures is largely tinged with rejoicing that the day of the grotesque haystack bunch of jute is passed, and that the simple, graceful coiffure is coming back into its own.

Beginning with left to right, a very effective and simple style of hair-dressing is shown by Miss Ann Swinburne as Seraphina in the title role of "The Madcap Duchess." The effect is that of a Psyche knot with the added gracefulness achieved by a braid worn over the forehead, with the side hair brought low over the ears.

The style adopted by Miss Margaret Andrews is in direct contrast, with the effect almost as simple. The hair is bunched at the crown with the effect of a soft drooping pompadour in front.

The style so well suited to the piquant face of Miss Peggy Wood is simplicity itself. The hair is parted in the middle, allowed to fall loosely over the ears, and is gathered in a low knot at the back.

Ann Swinburne — Margaret Andrews — Peggy Wood — Glen Ellis

Miss Glen Ellis has the perfectly rounded head that permits of the hair being drawn into a low bun at the back, with a fluffy effect in front redeeming it from the trying severity this style would otherwise assume.

Meeting the Difficulty

A GOOD story is told of a worthy Quaker who lived in a country town. The man was rich and benevolent, and his means were often in frequent requisition for purposes of local charity or usefulness. The townspeople wanted to rebuild their parish church and a committee was appointed to raise funds. It was agreed that the Quaker could not be asked to subscribe toward an object so contrary to his principles, but then, on the other hand, so true a friend to the town might take it amiss if he was not at least consulted on a matter of such general interest. So one of their number went and explained to him their project—the old church was to be removed and such and such steps taken toward the construction of a new one.

"That was right," said the Quaker, "in supposing that my principles would not allow me to assist in building a church. But didst thee not say something about pulling down a church? Thee mayst put my name down for a hundred pounds to pull it down."

The First of a New and Intensely Interesting Series

The Girl, the World and the Devil

THE FIFTH GIRL

MISS PATTERSON needs no introduction to the readers of this newspaper as one of the foremost woman newspaper writers of the day. As she has achieved her success entirely unaided through twenty years of devotion to her work, one could hardly choose a more efficient person to instruct and advise a girl who is going out into the world to earn her own living. And incidentally Miss Patterson virtually tells her own working life story.—EDITOR.

By ADA PATTERSON

YOU are seventeen and you must find work to live. It is a commonplace situation to everyone save you, and your mother, who, if she is wise and tender, lies awake many a night agonizing over it.

You are the fifth girl. One of every five girls in the United States works for her own living, and, in greater or less degree, helps others to live. So you see you are not alone. You are, in fact, quite usual.

You must earn your living, and I, who have earned mine for twenty years, write because I want to help you. Of course, in twice ten years of earning my rent, my food, my clothing, that with which to pay my doctors and dentists, and my savings fund for that time when I will be able to earn less than I do today, perhaps less than you will tomorrow, I have learned some truths about the girl who wants to get on and who does.

MOST IMPORTANT

Are you surprised to learn that most important is what you think about it? No, not what others think about you or what you are planning to do, what you yourself think about it. What is the difference between the persons you like and those you dislike? It is what they think about things, isn't it? Think that over, for it is true. What we think about anything is one attitude toward it, and all important is attitude. Our thoughts are our character, and believe me, dear little Miss Seventeen, upon character rather than brains depends success. Sturdiness, inability to be beaten, hopefulness, belief in the best, these are our character because they are our thoughts. Yes, it is most important what you think about this work finding and living making.

Think your own thoughts about it and see that they are right thoughts. What your mother thinks about it. She is terrified and really thinks that the world out beyond your curtain shades is a place of carnage, of awful, death-dealing battle. It isn't quite that. Take my word. I have been in it for twenty years. Not what Mrs. Brown who lives around the corner thinks about it. Her's are thoughts of dark suspicion. Out in that world, Mrs. Brown believes, every man has cloven hoofs and every woman a hard heart. Don't accept Mrs. Brown's thoughts. Looking at the world through a crack in the parlor shutter, her vision is narrow. The business world isn't hades, though in acute moments its temperature resembles it. The business world, on the whole, corresponds fairly with the family and neighborhood and friendship circle. You will find about the same ratio of good and bad traits in the folk you meet. Working for your living is not a sinister girl trap, nor is it a heavenly state. Like the family and friends, it has its good and bad points.

NOT AN IDEAL PLACE

The business world is neither an ideal place nor an impossible one. It is a place to sell goods, and you have goods to sell. That is what being a business girl means. The business world is a market place or a shop window. Stop at the next market place, or passe at the next shop window you pass, and study it. The men who buy something to sell has placed his goods there and arranged it in as attractive a way as he can. That is what you must do. You have to sell some ability or talent. Perhaps you sing. Perhaps you sit on a high stool and add long columns of figures and make them balance. Perhaps you cook or scrub.

"Show your best goods," says the merchant.

"Do your best work," say I. The world wants good work, and will pay for it. Don't sentimentalize. Leave your emotions at home. Be clear-eyed and calm-pulsed to market. You have something to sell. Make your sales. Polish your goods. Sell them. Those are the right thoughts about business life.

Miss Patterson's next article will be on "How to Get Work."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I HOPE to goodness we don't never have a real war with them Mexican fellows," said the Manicure Lady. "That is about all the talk I have heard up to the house for the last week, and I am getting kind of scared and nervous about it. My father's father fought in the Civil Rebellion, George, and got onesot his legs shot clean off at the battle of Missionary Ridge. I used to see him hobbling around the house when I was a little kid, and I couldn't help thinking when I seen his wooden leg that war was everything Mister Sherman said it was. I suppose the scars of war is honorable scars, George, but you got to admit that there ain't much class to one of them old fashioned wooden legs, big in the calf and little in the ankul and no instep on them.

"Every time the old gent gets a little lit up he tells that he is of fighting stock, and you would think to hear him go on that his ancestors have all went to West Point and served Uncle Sam all over the world. His old man was the only one that ever smelled gunpowder, and he didn't come out of it with no flying colors except the wooden leg, as I was saying. I think he got that leg but off in the only battle he was ever in. But the old gent is full of the warfever now, and he has even got brother Wilfred talking war and strategy. Will, fred wouldn't make much of a boy in blue, with that gentle, shrinking poet nature of his, but he thinks that it war broke out with Mexico he would be right down there with bells on. I don't believe they would take him for a soldier at all, on account of his lungs being weak and his small size being against him, but between him and the old gent all we hear now is war, war, war.

"It kind of grates on mother and us girls, because we ain't of a fighting nature, and the only fun me and Maymie gets is kidding the life out of Wilfred when he tells how he would storm the ramparts of the enemy and save the country's flag. We told him last night that the only thing he could charge was his board bill, and Maymie found a war poem that he had wrote and was going to send to the Flour and Feed Courier. This is how it goes, George.—

"'Hark! I read it if it is long," said the Head Barber. "Me and the Missus had a few words before I left home this morning, and I don't feel none like listening to poetry."

"It ain't much, George. Listen: 'Oh, Mexico, thou land of beer

And cactus thorns and creeping things

You most assuredly will be beat

If Uncle Sam on you his soldiers flings.

I shall volunteer for the Stars and Stripes

And fight like a hero our flag to save

And if your navy with ours does clash

You will surely go to a watery grave.

And if I die on the battlefield

The world will say that I done my best.

And my greatness it will be revealed

When my hands are folded on my breast.'

"He ain't giving himself any the worst of it in that poem," said the Head Barber. "It sounds kind of foolish to me."

"To me, too," said the Manicure Lady. "Poets all gets flighty."

FIND THE CAT

A gentleman once had a cat, of which he was very fond. It was allowed a pound of nincement every day; but in spite of this he noticed that pussy was wasting away to a mere skeleton. He called his servant.

"Didn't I tell you to give that cat a pound of meat every day?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," said the servant, "I've given him every morning before you're out of bed," was the answer.

"I don't believe a word of it. I believe you either pocket the money or dispose of the meat in another way. Bring me the scales."

The gentleman placed the cat on the scales, and it was found to weigh exactly a pound.

"There," said the servant, "I tell you I gave that cat a pound of meat this morning."

"There's the pound of meat, sure enough," said the gentleman, stroking his chin. "But, if that's so, where's the cat?"

This is how it goes, George.—

"'Hark! I read it if it is long," said the Head Barber. "Me and the Missus had a few words before I left home this morning, and I don't feel none like listening to poetry."

"It ain't much, George. Listen: 'Oh, Mexico, thou land of beer

And cactus thorns and creeping things

You most assuredly will be beat

If Uncle Sam on you his soldiers flings.

I shall volunteer for the Stars and Stripes

And fight like a hero our flag to save

And if your navy with ours does clash

You will surely go to a watery grave.

And if I die on the battlefield

The world will say that I done my best.

And my greatness it will be revealed

When my hands are folded on my breast.'

"He ain't giving himself any the worst of it in that poem," said the Head Barber. "It sounds kind of foolish to me."

"To me, too," said the Manicure Lady. "Poets all gets flighty."

FIND THE CAT

A gentleman once had a cat, of which he was very fond. It was allowed a pound of nincement every day; but in spite of this he noticed that pussy was wasting away to a mere skeleton. He called his servant.

"Didn't I tell you to give that cat a pound of meat every day?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," said the servant, "I've given him every morning before you're out of bed," was the answer.

"I don't believe a word of it. I believe you either pocket the money or dispose of the meat in another way. Bring me the scales."

The gentleman placed the cat on the scales, and it was found to weigh exactly a pound.

"There," said the servant, "I tell you I gave that cat a pound of meat this morning."

"There's the pound of meat, sure enough," said the gentleman, stroking his chin. "But, if that's so, where's the cat?"

wanted an antique. And this was the first one she had seen at a moderate price.

"Nora, I believe we CAN stay right down," determinedly. "I'm going to rush up the antique shop and ask them about it."

The next moment Helen was looking up the antique shop in the telephone book.

"Hello, is this the antique shop? This is Mrs. W. E. Curtis—you remember we bought a sideboard from you? Well, I've just bought an old china closet, and we have it in here. It's been very badly polished. I wonder if you could tell me how to rub it down. Oh, no, I want to do it myself. Oh, I see," stiffly. "Very well—good-by."

With flaming cheeks Helen slammed up the receiver. "As if I would ever go another thing of that kind! He had refused to tell her anything, insisting that she should send it around and let HIM do it over.

Promptly she called up another dealer, who, in marked contrast to the other, very generously told her what to do. First powdered pumice-stone and cracle oil—rub in with the grain of the wood. That was all.

Helen thanked him effusively, determining to stick with and recommend him whenever she could.

Gleefully she ran back to Nora, who was now washing the glass doors.

"Nora, I want you to go to the paint store around the corner and get some fine powdered pumice-stone and some crude oil. This bottle will do for the oil; about 10 cents worth, and say you want enough pumice-stone to rub down a china closet. Now hurry. I want to get this done before Mr. Curtis comes home—I'm sure we can!"

GOING TO WORK

When Nora returned, Helen eagerly opened the bag of pumice stone.

"Now put some of this in a saucer and the crude oil in another saucer and get me a couple of soft cloths."

Hurriedly she slipped on an old wrapper and a pair of working gloves and started in with eager anticipation.

"I guess we'd better try it on another piece first. Get me that little stool from the library. I never liked the finish on that."

Nora brought the foot-stool and Helen flipped her cloth in the oil, then in the powdered pumice-stone, and began rubbing gently. It was fascinating work.

Since then her husband has deserted her, her home has been sold under a mortgage, and she has new relations to support. Her idea of bliss these days is a humdrum life.

—FRANCIS L. GARSIDE.

STARTLING RESULTS

A butcher whose business had been steadily declining, owing chiefly to a rival having set up on the opposite side of the street, confided to his minister that he saw nothing for it but to close his shop and leave the town.

The clergyman suggested that perhaps he had not made any serious effort to retain the trade; but the butcher replied that he had come all he knew, without success.

"I see," said the minister, "have you tried the effect of prayer?"

No, he had not thought of trying prayer, but he would do so before putting up the shutters.

A week elapsed, when the minister happening to pass the butcher's shop, found it in full swing with delight.

"Well," the cleric asked, "did you try the power of prayer?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply, "and I will had tried it before. I prayed the very night you left me, and on the following morning the fellow across the street broke his neck."

An Anniversary

A man may be rough-looking and you have a touch of sentiment about him.

A ragged, ill-kept-looking man appeared at the door of a woman's house, and in a pleading tone asked:

"Have you a piece of cake, lady to give a poor man who hasn't had a bite for two days?"

"Cake!" echoed the woman in surprise. "Isn't bread good enough for you?"

"Ordinarily, yes, ma'am. But this is my birthday," explained the tramp.

"What did he say?" eagerly, when Nora finally came back. "Can he fix it?"

He said he'd try, ma'am, but that he'd have to send it to you before Saturday. He has so many jobs on hand that when you time to try this closet would be chopped until Saturday.

"I was positive that Warren's first words would be, 'Can't you get it done sooner?' And she carefully rehearsed her self to say:

"But when a little after six she heard Warren's latch key she knew that she was guilty.

VERY NERVOUS

"Well, how's the china closet?" was the greeting as he strode straight into the dining room.

"I think it's wonderful!" trying to hide her nervousness. "Look how pretty it is as to that corner! Don't you see that top? And the legs—oh, I'm wild about those legs! Wait, I'll show you a trick in the way of English fox-hunt almost exactly like it."

Helen ran into the library and returned with a nervously tender look in the paper. Why didn't he say something about the drawers?

Warren went to work for the drawers as I went them out to have them fitted," explained, discovered at his

"Gosh," grunted Warren mood-

"Here it is!" giving him the book and pointing to the illustration. "You see it's just the same style—those on the legs and the same shaped top. And look what it says. A very fine specimen of early Sheraton cabinet work, in the section of the Hon. S. W. Partridge, of Boston. It's a been a question of the new dull finish of the mahogany. You rubbed it down, did you?"

"Didn't I tell you I did?" irritably. "Oh, if you'd only seen that awful gloss polish!"

"What a little crude oil and powdered pumice-stone will do," chuckled the dealers and he told me how to do it."

"I'm sure I ought to have done your examination, and so save time—those on the drawers in EXACTLY this finish. Ask him what he'll charge to put what he's done on the rest of the piece. And say we MUST have it tomorrow!"

HER JOY SPOILED

When Nora had gone, Helen went to work on the rest of the closet, and after an hour's very careful and very tiring rubbing, the piece was transformed. But the joy she would have taken in this task was spoiled by the thought of the drawers.

What excuse could she give Warren for having sent them away? She could think of nothing better than to say she was giving the work as a gift.

If only she could tell him the truth! But after all, he'd worried her so much about it alone, he would storm out at her for claim she had refused it.

Tabloid Fables

WHAT does it mean, Mother Mine, to say one is fickle?

There are many definitions, My Child, but the feminine one generally it is a woman's idea that a man is fickle because he does not have the same opinions at forty that he had at twenty-five.

How many maids, Mother, does the woman in average circumstances keep?

Every woman, Little One, keeps at least three maids. The one that is going, the one that is coming, and the one that is there.

Do women ever agree, Mother Mine?

On just two subjects, Daughter. They always agree on the opinion that the right man needs watching, and that there isn't a remedy that will stop hair from coming out.

What, Mother, is Transmigration?

I can define Transmigration best, Little One, by giving an illustration. The woman who refuses to go to church on Easter because she hasn't a new hat is the woman who, when reincarnated, would in the find she has been transformed into a sheep.

What, Mother, is your idea of mascarine?

It is that which foolish women expect to be taken seriously. Little One, for instance: A recent woman's magazine gave under the heading, "A Few Finishing Recipes," the following important recipes: "Mexican Kisses." "Chocolate Coating for Nuts," "Pineapple Delights," "Marshmallows" and "Maple Fudges." You do not see the wit in it, Little One? Ah, that is because you are so young!

What is meant, Mother, by the word Humdrum

It is a word, Daughter, which married women use. They complain their lives are humdrum. I once knew a woman, and desire well to this, Heedless One, who complained that her life was humdrum, my birthday," explained the tramp.

A Widow in Distress

SOME TIMELY ADVICE

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young widow, twenty-eight years of age, and for the past three years a man has been trying to induce me to marry him. I refused him repeatedly, telling him that I did not intend to marry anyone. He induced me to promise that if I ever married I would marry him. Some time ago I met a man whom I love very much and married him. Since then the other man has become a wreck and says he cannot live without me. I love my husband very much and he loves me, but I cannot be happy knowing that the other man is unhappy on account of me. He says that if I would let him see me sometimes it would make it easier for him. Please advise me if it would be right if I should let him see me.

SO, if you should see him sometimes it would make it easier for him—would it?

Well, how about making it easier for you?

And then the man you're married—what about him?

You've promised to love and honor him. Do you think you would be honoring him if you saw this other man just because the other man wants you to do so?

When you married your husband you gave up every sentimental obligation you ever owed or might, could, would or should owe to any other man on earth—as long as that husband is alive and you live with him.

This man who is anxious to have you think about him when he knows you are married, and you are married, don't worth anybody's thought—for a single minute.

If he were he would try to help you—not try to harm you. He knows perfectly well that he is asking you to do something you have no right to do at all—something that will get you into trouble just as sure as you even consider it for a minute.

Who is he that he dares presume so far?

When you married your husband you were through once and for all with this man—don't see him again at all—if you can help it.

Don't risk a good home and a good husband for the sake of a vain fool who wants to make you appear as silly as he is.

PAYMENT IN KIND

He was a poor man, but had been elected, at last, to call to the doctor to attend his little girl. Her illness had turned out to be a serious one, and the doctor had had to pay many visits and leave a good deal of medicine for his patient.

Now, however, she was well again and her father stood in the doctor's room, waiting for the bill to be made out.

When, at last, the account was presented to him, he was almost paralyzed to see the huge amount he owed.

"The small amount is for the medicine, and the large one is for my call at your house," said the doctor.

The hard-up father took out his last ounce.

"Here," he said, "is the money for the medicine. My—my wife will her self return your calls!"

DOUBT LYNN'S VOTE GOING WET AFTER 6 YEARS

An expected recount of the vote by which Lynn went license by fifty-three after a six-year dry period and the granting, in Lawrence, of former Mayor White's petition for a recount, stand out as features of the elections in six Essex Massachusetts cities. The ballot boxes in Lawrence meantime are being guarded by police. The vote was: Swanton, 4,906; White, 4,814. The recount will be held Saturday.

In Melrose, on the question: "Shall the keeping of fowl be regulated by ordinance?" 655 persons voted yes and 1848 no, settling a vexed problem. Mayor Oliver B. Minnick was re-elected over former Mayor Charles E. French. No license won.

In Woburn, "Handsome Jack" Geraghty, who married Julia French in Newport's auto elopement, was elected to the Board of Aldermen. Mayor William H. Heuchey, Democrat, was re-elected over John W. Fox, Republican. The city will continue no-license.

Credit Men Want Currency Change

The Wonderful Magnet

How Wild Superstition Settles Down Into Scientific Reality

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company

Everybody knows something of the peculiarities of the magnet. As a boy you led tiny painted ducks around the water basin, holding a magnet in your hand, or you owned a horseshoe magnet that would pick up nails and needles.

You know now in a general kind of way that the magnet is a very useful as well as a somewhat mysterious thing.

The old Greeks and Romans simply knew that some remarkable iron ore found in Lydia, near the town of Magnesia, and hence called magnet, was capable of drawing and holding pieces of metal.

The ancients had the wildest theories concerning the magnet, just as we have wild theories about things that are new and strange to us today.

They thought that the magnet could be used in cases of sickness, that it could attract wood and flesh, that it influenced the human brain, causing melancholy. They believed that the power of a magnet could be destroyed by rubbing garlic on it, and that power brought back again by dipping the magnet in goat's blood. They believed that a magnet could be used to detect bad conduct in a woman; they believed that it would not attract iron in the presence of a diamond. They believed much other nonsense quite as ridiculous as the nonsense that we believe today.

It must have seemed a great waste of time in wise men in the old days to discuss the magnet or think about it at all. Please observe how the apparent nonsense of early speculation finally ripens into actual utility, and learn to respect those who deal as best they can with questions that seem beyond our comprehension.

First the magnet was made actually and wonderfully useful in the compass. Who discovered the compass nobody knows. It was probably invented by the Chinese and brought to Europe through the Arabs. Anyhow, some genius found out that a small needle brought in contact with the so-called lodestone, or magnetic ore absorbs the qualities of the lodestone, and when placed on a pivot will always point to the north.

In the magnet there were and there still are many mysteries. A form of perpetual motion seems to be embodied in the principle of magnetism. One strange fact is this, that the weight of the metal is exactly the same before it is magnetized and after it is magnetized.

Early students thought that the magnet pointed toward some particular spot in the sky, perhaps some magnetic star. One genius felt sure that there must be huge mountains of lodestone near the North Pole. This suggestion was followed by ingenious yarns to the effect that in the extreme North ships had to be built with wooden nails, instead of iron nails, as the magnetic mountains would draw the iron nails out of the ship.

After this came the more rational conception that our own earth was a great magnet, and that the little magnet in the compass simply obeys in pointing the greater force of the earth magnet.

In thousands of ways today this magnetic power is utilized.

That the earth itself is a great magnet cannot be questioned. And there is no doubt that each of us human beings is a compound magnet on his own account, depending for his welfare on magnetic force.

The millions of red corpuscles in the blood, each with its infinitesimal particles of iron, absorb in the lungs and distribute throughout the body the electric forces on which we depend, and with which we do our work.

When you read of men and women dealing in a blundering kind of a way with abstract, abstruse speculations and problems, do not laugh at them too heartily. They are no more ridiculous than the old Greeks who thought that a magnet could be regulated by garlic or goat's blood. And their wild theories of today may settle down into great utility centuries from now. This applies to Christian Science, faith cures, telepathy, and the many other speculations of the present day. There is unquestionably much future fruit and value in many or all of them.

Hetch Hetchy Wins Over Humbug

The decisive vote of 43 to 25 by which the United States Senate passed the Hetch Hetchy bill, giving the city of San Francisco the right to impound and use for public purposes the waters of the Tuolumne River, ends a Congressional fight of a most unusual character in which the AMERICAN and other Hearst newspapers led the successful forces.

The San Francisco Examiner a few days before the vote published in Washington a complete special edition, giving the arguments in favor of the measure, the opinions of experts, and illustrations of the valley as it appears now and will appear after the improvement. The paper was eagerly sought for and did much to create a well-informed sentiment in and about the Capitol.

Practically alone among the great cities of the United States San Francisco has been in the grasp of a privately owned water company which furnishes an insufficient water supply at exorbitant rates.

The struggle over the bill is instructive as showing how readily shrewd managers of a monopoly can rally to their aid well meaning but ill-informed people of prominence, and dupe, or buy, a large, but careless, section of the press.

The Hearst newspapers have urged the passage of this bill because they held human beings of more importance than scenery, but even at that did not fail to inform themselves and their readers that the scenery of Hetch Hetchy would be enhanced rather than impaired, and made more accessible, instead of being obliterated by the proposed improvements. The literary gentlemen, college professors and newspapers that have been used as catspaws by the water company have been made ridiculous because they did not take the trouble to ascertain the facts.

A Second-Hand Christmas

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

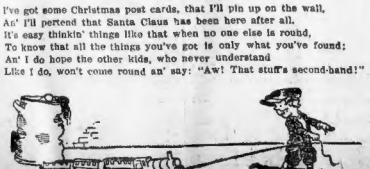
I WISHT that I could find some place where Christmas toys was cheap,
The only kind I ever get is off a rubbish heap,
An' though I almost fool myself pertendin' they are new,
An' have real fun a-makin' b'lieve that Santa Claus is true,
It's always spoiled the Christmas fun that I have gone an' planned
To hear the other kids sing out: "Them things is second hand!"

I 'spose when little kids is poor they hadn't ought to 'spect
That Santa Claus would come around an' bring 'em things direct.
I 'spose they'd 'ought to be content with lookin' in a store
And wonderin' just what lucky kids them lovely things is for.
An' when they find some busted toys I guess they'd ought to say,
"Well, I've got somethin', anyway, to play with Christmas Day."

Last year I found a nice green tree out on a dump downtown,
An' saved it for a long, long time, but it got sick an' brown,
An' so when mother needed wood I burned it up this Fall,
For second-handed Christmas trees is worse than none at all.
An' when it crackled in the stove, I jus' set there all still
A-sayin', quiet, to myself, "There goes your Christmas, Bill."

But yesterday when I went out I got cheered up again,
For in a dirty areaway I found a busted train;
The coaches didn't have no wheels, the engine wouldn't run,
But I will have it Christmas Day, an', gee! it will be fun
To tuck it in my stockin' when I go to bed at night
An' make believe that I'm surprised, as soon as it gets light.

I've got some Christmas post cards, that I'll pin up on the wall,
An' I'll pertend that Santa Claus has been here after all.
It's easy thinkin' things like that when no one else is round,
To know that all the things you've got is only what you've found;
An' I do hope the other kids, who never understand
Like I do, won't come round an' say: "Aw! That stuff's second-hand!"



How We Can Remould the World

By EDWIN MARKHAM

A FIFTEEN-CENT pamphlet packed with value comes from the Equal Suffrage Association of Chicago. It comes under the title, "Social Forces," and contains a topical outline, with a full bibliography, covering governmental methods and ideals, together with industrial and educational types, as well as problems of women and children. Libraries, schools, clubs and individual students will find this an awakening little volume. I call a few wise paragraphs:

"We should disabuse our minds of the all too prevalent idea that what we do is of no value in the development of the race, that certain reforms are bound to come anyway, and we may as well sit back and fold our arms and watch them come. Said a great sociologist recently: 'Evolution has now gotten beyond the blind, groping, involuntary stage. Civilized human beings are now able to foresee, to direct and to hasten the process of social advance. Changes which, working alone and unaided, might be fifty or a hundred years in coming, can be brought about by the co-operation of individuals in a small fraction of that time. The race is entitled to those short cuts. Of course, we may make mistakes. Every chance to do a good thing is a chance to make a mistake. But if the short cut we attempt leads us into a swamp, we need only to turn around and go back a ways and try another.'

"Cannot women, in the larger field now opening before them, bring to the world as their contribution to social progress an attitude of mind sufficiently open and unhampered by tradition to shorten the process by eliminating at least the time occupied in 'sticking the new idea around the block?'

"As we think back into the human societies that were here before we came, we see in each a few great struggling, lifting souls; and here and there, among the satisfied folks, a man or woman who saw the way to a freer, more beautiful social order. And the question at once confronts us: Why did Mencius in China, Gautama in India, Aurelius, Michael Angelo, Francis Shaftsbury, each in his time, see so clearly, try so hard, and succeed so little in serving real social progress? Why, indeed, when each age has had its social redeemers, has the household of the world retained so much of shiftless disorder and dirt, so much of yesterday's left-over untidiness and ugliness and disease-breeding filth, so much dullness and wretchedness of children and us all?

"Edison can work out the plan of a storage battery all by himself, and Burbank can produce a spineless cactus all alone; but the idea of a society without victims, the plan of its realizations and the definite practical program of what to do next to secure it may be perfectly developed in the mind of one of our steady-looking fellows, and it will never do any good, it can never be realized, except through the co-operation of all of us in seeing what he sees, in understanding his reasoning, in uniting with his determining.

"This is the distinguishing perception of our time—that we can have any sort of world we choose, that we can leave to our descendants any sort of world we will, and that this recreating of social life cannot be achieved except through our companionship in co-operation, together using all the facts that any of us has learned. This dawning of the creative social consciousness is expressing itself in many particular directions, political, economic, artistic; and each of these divides again like some great limb of a living tree into its branches.'

A Cheerful Wife the Real Home Maker

Husband and Children Think More of Easy Going Woman Who Smiles Than One Always "Cleaning House"

By DOROTHY DIX

I KNOW a woman—you know her also, or one who is her living image—who literally wears herself to a frazzle doing her duty by her family.

Her house is swept, and scrubbed, and rubbed, and polished until it is clean and shiny as a new pin. Her husband's socks have never a hole in them. Her children's clothes are ruffled and tucked and hand-embroidered until they look as if they had come out of a swell shop, instead of being made at home.

Not a penny is ever wasted in her home, and with her own hands she cooks dishes that require her standing over the stove for hours, because they are husband's or children's favorites.

Sounds like a description of the ideal wife and the ideal home, doesn't it? You would think that her family would worship her, wouldn't you, and you couldn't pry them away from their own fireside?

But not so. The woman complains bitterly of the ingratitude of her family, and that they make no return in affection for the endless devotion and labor that she lavishes upon them. She says, truly enough, that they never stay at home if there is any other place to which they can go.

She doesn't know the reason why, but it's plain enough to every one else. She toils so hard doing the little things of life that she has no time for the big things. She's so busy sweeping under beds and brushing down cobwebs that she has no leisure in which to get acquainted with her husband and children and to be companions to them.

Above all, she keeps herself so worn and weary that she is nothing but a bundle of raw nerves, and is so irritable that she nags and frets and scolds at her family and is about as soothing and agreeable a companion as a fretful porcupine would be. Therefore, husband and children dodge her society as often as possible.

Now, I am not minimizing the value of good housekeeping. It is essential to the health and happiness of a family that the house be kept clean, and the food well cooked, and the clothes mended, and the bills looked after. But it is of far greater importance that a wife and mother should be amiable and pleasant, and if she's just got enough physical strength to be one or the other, by all means let her put her force into jollying instead of jelly-making.

If you will think over the women you know whose husbands and children are crazy over them and who are always telling what "my wife said" and "my mother thinks" you will have it borne in upon your mind that every one of these women are good humored, cheerful women, whose laughs are hung on hair triggers, and not one of them is a conspicuously good housekeeper. Indeed, some of them are woefully slack housekeepers, but the husband and the children don't care if there is dust on the upper right hand corner of the top pantry shelf, and they sometimes have to pin things together with safety pins because a button is off. Mother is so jolly and so ready to chime in with any youthful plan.

It is better for a woman to neglect her house than to neglect being with her husband and children. It is better for her to give them plainer food and more of her society. It is better for her to leave the kitchen sink unscrubbed than to refuse the children's invitations to go off to the park with them.

The money that such a man makes brings as little happiness to his family as does the expert housekeeping of such a woman.

Fathers and mothers and husbands and wives owe the duty of cheerfulness and good humor and pleasantness to their families as well as that of providing for their physical wants, and if they must decide between the two, those who devote themselves to pleasantness choose the better part.

Honest Hypocrites

By ELBERT HUBBARD

JOHN Fiske once wrote an essay entitled, "Honest Hypocrites." The argument was that a hypocrite is a hypocrite; but the disciples of a hypocrite are usually earnest and sincere people and, therefore, honest hypocrites, or not hypocrites at all.

This on the theory that after a poseur has posed long enough the pose becomes natural, and he is, therefore, not a poseur.

In art the fakey has always abounded. The man who dogmatizes about art puts his reason on the slide.

Just now there is what is called "The Art of the Futurist." It is symbolic, cryptic, poetic, impressionable.

The perpetrators pretend to know what they mean. The fact is they do not. They smile complacently at the lack of imagination possessed by hoi polloi.

In the meantime they have hypnotized themselves into the belief that they mean something, and they are waiting for some messiah to come and tell them what it is.

Founders of religion are poets who are taken seriously.

Then the question comes: Can a man be an unconscious faker? And the answer is: He most certainly can.

Having once espoused a cause, we are bound to maintain it. Even when new light comes we will fight against change.

So, with the theological and medical faker went the sartorial faker, and we spoke feelingly and with pride of "my tailor." We made excuses for not attending this or that meeting, because we had an engagement with "my tailor."

I can well remember how my heart was filled with pride when I stood on a platform — a kind of improvised throne—and a tailor took off his coat and made ready for a great and serious operation.

With a tape measure around his neck and an adviser standing by he went at me. And way back in the dim recesses of the store, at a desk, sat a man with pencil in hand.

The call was given, "All right," and then the tape measure was put over my manly anatomy.

It was pleasing to my sense of approbation to be thus administered to. The man measuring me and the man looking on consulted from time to time.

They called off the measurements thus: 'Thirty-two and a half, twenty-one and three-quarters, sixteen and a half." Then the tape measure was applied the second time, and the call was given: "Make that sixteen and seven-eighths," and the man in the dark recesses of the store echoed back the numbers. These were repeated, to see that they were all down correctly.

This means truth in business. Quality and fit are guaranteed. And, behold, now, clothes ready to wear represent, in a business way, the very acme of honesty, directness, simplicity and right intent.

Questions in Science

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—1. "Would meteors be visible in a telescope?"

2. "Is the law of perspective overcome by a big telescope looking toward the zenith any more than toward the horizon?"

3. "If a balloon just visible in the horizon be placed directly overhead, will it be seen more or less plainly?"

4. "If visible, say, at a distance of fifteen miles on horizon, would it be visible at a distance of 15,000 miles overhead?"

A.—1. Yes, during an infinitesimal fraction of a second, if one should by mere chance happen to pass in front of the great object glass. That I saw two last night. They appeared to move as fast as a lightning streak But the magnifying power was 300. The specific speed of the meteor was about 44 miles per second. Its speed was 26 miles per second and that of the earth 18½. The three bodies met in collision both meteors hit the earth.

A.—2. The law of perspective cannot be overcome; but the law of refraction loses its effect when a star is in the zenith—that is, the rays of light from it come on a straight line, while from a star near the horizon the ray assumes its maximum curvature.

A.—3. More plainly.

A.—4. We must first know diameter of balloon and size of telescope to see a balloon 15,000 miles away.
